IN THE UNITED NATIONS 2030 AGENDA, APPROVED BY WORLD LEADERS IN 2015, CONSTITUTES THE NEW FRAMEWORK FOR GLOBAL SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT AND ESTABLISHES 17 SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS (SDGS). IT REPRESENTS THE COMMITMENT TO ERADICATE POVERTY AND ACHIEVE SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT BY 2030 AROUND THE WORLD, EXCLUDING NO ONE. THEY COVER ALL ASPECTS OF HUMAN WELL-BEING TO END POVERTY, PROTECT THE PLANET, AND ENSURE THAT ALL PEOPLE ENJOY PEACE AND PROSPERITY. GENDER INEQUALITY IS WIDELY RECOGNIZED AS A CENTRAL ASPECT OF DEVELOPMENT AND ONE OF THE FUNDAMENTAL REQUIREMENTS FOR ACHIEVING SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT AND ACHIEVING THE SDGS.
As a tool for social action, the project will be carried out using the ecofeminist theory. Which already, in 1974, Françoise d'Eaubonne, a French writer and feminist, claimed the female body as her own property, which led many women, like herself, to realize the health dangers it posed the use of certain pesticides, fertilizers or excessive medication. That women lead the statistics on poverty rates and their position of social exclusion makes them more vulnerable to natural disasters and ecological devastation is not a "natural" fact. It affects national economies and people's lives, and it costs communities and countries a lot today and even more tomorrow.

Another aspect in which we want to address this project is in relation to the concept of leadership, understood from the perspective of feminist pedagogy. The representation of women in political decision-making processes continues to increase but slowly. In relation to this aspect, UN Women collects in its studies that only 24.3% of national parliaments are made up of the female gender, being considered a very slow evolution process since 1995, when it stood at 11.3%. (Women International Parliaments, as of February 2019). Also, in June 2019, only 11 women are heads of state and 12 became heads of government. As for the differences between regions, there are still percentages that do not exceed an equal mark. In February 2019, the following percentages were recorded according to UN Women (individual, lower and upper chambers combined): Nordic countries, 42.5%; Americas, 30.6%; Europe (including the Nordic countries), 28.7%; Europe (excluding the Nordic countries), 27.2%; Sub-Saharan Africa, 23.9%; Asia, 19.8%; Arab countries, 19%; and the Pacific region, 16.3%.
Objectives

- Raise awareness of current environmental challenges and explore the interconnectivity of those challenges with the gender equality globally.

- Develop a common understanding of the concept of leadership and gender and explore instruments for its promotion among civil society youth groups to help improve understanding of gender aspects of climate change.

- Develop the capacity of youth workers to work more effectively with youth in the themes of actions related to the environment and sustainable ways of life;

- Explore environmental educational methods and equip participants with non-formal learning tools that.

Address the issues;

- Giving participants the opportunity to exchange experiences and knowledge in the fields of social entrepreneurship, ecology and feminism.

- Promote diversity, intercultural dialogue, common values of ecology, freedom, tolerance and respect for human rights.
